

BIDS TO BOARD THE FAMILY

CLACKLEY'S TRY TO PICK A SUMMER HOUSE.

There are Mr. and Mrs. Clackley and ten children. Enough to induce lively competition. Outcome of a novel undertaking not satisfactory though.

"My dear," said Mrs. Clackley with such a notable stress that her husband looked up from his newspaper and, gazing at the length of the table past all ten of the little Clackleys, fixed his eyes expectantly on her and ejaculated:

"Well?"

"Once again I ask you, are we going away this summer?"

"You and the children are going away," corrected Mr. Clackley, even as he made answer. His wife went on:

"Where are we going away to?"

Mr. Clackley surveyed once more the five little Clackleys on one side of the board—boys and the five little Clackleys on the other side of the board—girls. Then he said:

"Do you know, any resort ought to be glad to get us."

"In what way?" asked Mrs. Clackley.

"In any way," responded her husband.

"From a business standpoint or from a social vantage we confer a favor on any summer resort at all. We are large in number. If we went to an abandoned farm it would become a summer resort on the spot. The farmhouse would soon be a hotel, nucleus of a dozen hotels; the children would populate a bathing beach. All day long the resort would ring with childish laughter."

"Stop, John," his wife said. "You will get the boys into the habit of bad oratory."

"Well," went on Mr. Clackley, "the point is summer resort hotels should compete to get us. Why don't they? Why have we not yet after your perforce drive through prospectuses, bought our friends for the names of likely places, made hasty trips into Connecticut and the Catskills in search of a spot without a charm far from the railroad with two old maids and an absent minded cook?"

"Eh?" said Mrs. Clackley out of her memories of Latin.

"Now I have an idea," her husband continued. "I am going to get the best board to be had at less cost than ever. I am going to advertise for a board and bid."

"What are they?" asked his wife. "Sealed bids? But they're bonds and buildings, aren't they, something to do with architecture?"

"My dear," he replied with the benevolent delight man takes in instructing, "they are the apothecary of auctioneering. You advertise just what you want and people bid to build it, if it's a building, or to buy it, if it's something for sale. The lowest bidder who comes up to specifications gets the contract. In this case we advertise what we want and people bid to supply it."

"Oh, very well, John," said Mrs. Clackley in a resigned if doubtful way. "I leave it to you. Only don't do anything rash."

At this point Mr. Clackley had to rush off to the office. Mrs. Clackley did not see him again till night. At supper he was in extraordinarily good humor. After the meal he got pencil and paper and lighting a cigar said:

"Now just what sort of a place would you like to go to this summer?"

Mrs. Clackley wavered. She traversed the ten children. She reduced their needs to a common denominator.

It must be a place by the seashore. It must be a farmhouse. There must be plenty of cream. There must be a few other children. Just her own grow into prospective. There must be no other persons. She thought perhaps on other persons. She thought perhaps on other persons. She thought perhaps on other persons.

"There's only one difficulty," said her husband. "All the specially good bids seem to be for a place with a swimming pool. I don't want to go to a place with a swimming pool."

"I won't have the children exploited," said Mrs. Clackley in a firm way. A moment later she cried out:

"What's the matter?" said Mr. Clackley in alarm.

"This horrible man," quivered his wife, "bids for an all or any part of said family and children in lots of two."

"Well, this will soon be over," observed her husband. "To-morrow's May 13, the last day."

"On that last day he came home at noon with a few more letters."

"The law business of Clackley & Clackley has suffered of late," he observed. "My dear, here's a letter describing just what we want—farm of fifty acres at one of those sneezing places on Long Island."

"Oh, we can't, John," broke in Mrs. Clackley. "The girls always get hay fever."

"Shucks!" said Mr. Clackley. "I mean one of those Long Island towns with a few children. Just her own grow into prospective. There must be no other persons. She thought perhaps on other persons. She thought perhaps on other persons."

WARNING TO PHYSICIANS

MUST REPORT BIRTHS WITHIN THIRTY-SIX HOURS.

And Deaths Within Twenty-four Hours After They Occur—Violations Punishable by a Year's Imprisonment or a Fine Not Exceeding $3,000 or Both.

ALBANY, May 20.—Attorney-General Carmody in an opinion rendered to State Commissioner of Health Dr. Eugene H. Porter defines the powers and duties of local boards of health and the State Department of Health in enforcing the provisions of section 22 of the public health law requiring prompt and complete reports of all births to be filed with the department each month. Mr. Carmody says:

"It is unnecessary to comment on the important benefits derived from the system of registration of births and deaths as provided by the statute known as the public health law, which includes enforceable provisions for the registration of all births and deaths. Section 5 of the public health law, relating to the registration of births and deaths, provides that the State Commissioner of Health shall take charge of the local registration in any municipality where such defects are known to exist in the registration of births and deaths and shall remain in control thereof until the local board of health satisfies the Commissioner of Health that it will make such record and registry complete as required by law, and all expenses incurred thereby shall be a charge upon the municipality."

"Section 21 of the same law prescribes the powers and duties of local boards of health and imposes upon local boards of health the duty to prescribe the powers and duties of the local health officer, who shall be its chief executive officer, and to direct him in the performance of his duty."

"This section also provides that every such local board shall make and publish from time to time all such orders and regulations as they may deem necessary and proper for the preservation of life and health and the execution and enforcement of this chapter in the municipality. It may employ such persons as may be necessary to enable it to carry into effect these orders and regulations and fix their compensation."

"Physicians are required to report births within thirty-six hours and deaths within twenty-four hours after they occur to the local board of health on the form prescribed by the State Department of Health."

"Section 17 of the penal law provides that a person who willfully violates, neglects or omits to comply with a local order or regulation prescribed by any local board of health or local health officer is guilty of a misdemeanor, and that a physician who willfully violates any provision of the health law or any regulation lawfully made or established by any public officer or board under the authority of the health laws, the punishment for violating which is not otherwise prescribed by those laws or by this chapter, is punishable by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding $3,000, or by both."

"Section 117 of the public health law provides that a physician who is guilty of a crime or misdemeanor may have his license to practice medicine or surgery revoked and his registration annulled."

"The method of registration of births by the local boards of health is prescribed by the State Department of Health and is as follows: The local board of health shall cause to be prepared a birth record book, which shall be maintained by the local board of health and shall be kept in the office of the local health officer."

Mormon Church Attacked
ON BATTLESHIP SILVER.

Miss Richards, representing the D. A. B., said Brigham Young was the Most Undesirable Type of American Citizen to Decorate the Silverware of a Ship.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Mormon Church was bitterly attacked at a hearing to-day before the House Committee on Naval Affairs, which is endeavoring to ascertain whether it has any jurisdiction to refuse to accept a silver service presented by the State of Utah for the battleship of the same name. The coffee tray of this service is to be adorned with engravings of Brigham Young and the Mormon Temple.

This hearing before the Naval Committee was by long odds the liveliest held at the Capitol this session. An idea of the vitriolic sort of language that was generally used can be gathered from the remark of Miss Janet Richards of this city, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution, that "we consider Brigham Young the most undesirable type of American citizen to be chosen to decorate the silverware of any battleship in the United States, to go around the world under the American flag."

Miss Richards added that "the Mormons are determined in their effort to score this point of having their religious symbols appear upon this silver service.
If the Catholics of America were to present a silver service to a battleship and the pieces contained a picture of the Pope of Rome, with the Vatican in the background, it would raise a furor in our country.
No such design would be accepted."
Yet the Pope is guilty of neither treason, murder nor polygamy. Then why name we have this so-called "Mormon prophet" and the Mormon Temple thrust upon us when we know that Brigham Young stood for that which was disreputable and undesirable? We appeal to this committee to have another design selected for this tray."

The Rev. Robert M. Stephenson, president of Westminster College, Salt Lake City, was also bitter in his criticisms of Mormonism.
